CURLEY IS RIGULOUS, SAYS FITZ

"I CAN NOT SELL THE COMMON"
—Mayor Fitzgerald

Mayor Fitzgerald thinks Mayor-elect Curley's plan to sell the Public Garden and apply the proceeds to the municipal debt is "ridiculous." The Mayor-elect has declared that he believes the people would approve the sale. Mayor Fitzgerald commented:

"Ridiculous! Why not sell the Common? He might be able to get $100,000 for that."

It was also pointed out that the act of 1889 by which the Public Garden was created provided that the land should never be sold. Mayor-elect Curley was quoted as saying only the consent of the Council was necessary to the sale. Mayor Fitzgerald said:

"It was also pointed out that the act of 1889 by which the Public Garden was created provided that the land should never be sold. Mayor-elect Curley was quoted as saying only the consent of the Council was necessary to the sale. Mayor Fitzgerald said:

Here is the full statement on the Public Garden question issued by Mayor Fitzgerald:

Mayor-elect Curley's proposition to sell the Public Garden is ridiculous. If he had made this proposition a part of his platform before election he would not have received 10,000 votes in Boston. The Public Garden is an institution, and like our Common is known all over the world. Visitors who have come here have told me that they considered it the most beautiful garden in America. If not in the world.

During the warm spell in the summer time, particularly on Sundays, it attracts hundreds of thousands of people, and one cannot witness a finer sight on Sunday afternoon, when the ordinary citizen, rich and poor alike, can be seen there together, admiring the wonderful floral displays which were inaugurated some years ago by Superintendent Galvin and continued by Mr. Douglas and the present superintendent. The coloring and harmony of these flowers is a great expert florist, yet it is within ten minutes' walk of the North and West Ends of the city, which contain the most crowded population not only of the city but of almost of the world. It is but almost of the world. It is but almost of the world. It is but almost of the world.

"WILL REALIZE MY DREAM."
The Public Garden edges the Back Bay, yet it is within ten minutes' walk of the North and West Ends of the city, which contain the most crowded population not only of the city but of almost of the world. It is but almost of the world. It is but almost of the world.

Two Ways to Get What You Want

First see if it is offered in the "Want Ad" columns of the American.
Chances are you will find precisely what you're looking for—whether an automobile or an investment opportunity, a new three-room apartment or "a mansion on the hill."
Or, if this wide range should fail you, turn around and tell your own story to the hundreds of thousands of readers of the American.

Put your want on paper in a few well-chosen words and leave it with any of the American's "Want Ad" stations, the branch office at 254 Washington street, Main office 80 Summer street, or

PUBLIC GARDEN SAFE

Here are the Statutes, Passed in 1889

LAW FORBIDS SALE

Under an act of Legislature passed in 1889, Section 3, Chapter 219, it would be impossible to sell the Public Garden according to Mayor-elect Curley's suggestion. The law provides that:
"No buildings shall be erected between Arlington and Charles streets except as are expedient for horticultural purposes, provided that nothing herein contained shall render it unlawful to erect a City Hall in the Public Garden."

JAB WOMAN AT THEATRE WITH NEEDLE

WORCESTER, Jan. 15.—The police have received two more complaints that "needle men" are at work in Worcester. One comes from a prominent Worcester woman. She says that while she was sitting in an orchestra stall at a local theatre she felt a jab in the arm and turned with a cry to see a man hurry away. She was in the back row of the orchestra and he had been standing behind her, outside the rail.

The police refused to give the names of the new complainants. Meanwhile Sarah Zeilin, the eleven-year-old girl whose brother, Morris, complained yesterday that his sister had been attacked, is suffering from the effects of her experience.

She is an employee in a front street shirtwaist factory. She was attacked on the street Monday night. The assailant stabbed her in the arm when turned and ran when she wheeled on him.

The police are thus far utterly at a loss in the three cases.

"NEMESIS" REPLIES TO CHANDLER

NEW YORK, Jan. 15.—William Travers Jerome will "fight to a finish" Harry K. Thaw's appeal for release on bail. He made this assertion today and declared at the same time that Thaw would ultimately be brought back to New York. Replying to criticism made by ex-Senator W. F. Chandler of New Hampshire of the course of action followed by Jerome and Attorney General Crampton, Jerome defended his note.

Chandler declared that if the proposition had been taken Thaw could have been recovered by the New York authorities. In his reply Jerome asserted that "even if a man is innocent he will be charged with a crime," and declared that for that reason Thaw had been retained for confinement.

"I don't want to say anything to hurt the feelings of Senator Chandler," said Jerome. "It is a charming man, but anyone who knows him would not take seriously anything he might say."

"The simple fact is that if we had followed the course suggested by Mr. Thaw, we incidentally might have brought Thaw back as he suggested. In fact, under the law, no inmate here would have been released at all."

HUNDREDS FLEE POTOMAC RIVER AS DAM BREAKS

POTOMAC, W. Va., Jan. 15.—Alarm was spread along the Potomac river for thirty miles today by reports that the 100-foot dam of the West Virginia Pulp & Paper Company, on the Stony River, a tributary of the Potomac, had broken and let loose a billion gallons of water. Hundreds of persons fled from their homes in terror, expecting a vast flood below. It was definitely established that, though part of the dam had given way, the main structure was still standing and the water was coming down slowly from the hills. Mr. S. C. Weaver, superintendent of the company received advice shortly before noon that it would require twenty-four hours for the Lake (formed by the dam to empty itself) at the rate the water was then coming down Stony river, and he was informed that there was no danger of a complete collapse of the dam. Alarm was felt particularly here, at Dobbs, another West Virginia town, and at all points. These three towns would be menaced by any sudden rise in the Potomac. Members of the West Virginia Public Service Commission, and officials of the company went to the dam soon as the first news of the break was received. They reported by telephone to President that early reports of heavy damage had been wildly exaggerated and that no lives had been lost.

incomparable softness, lustre and luxuriance.

Besides beautifying the hair, one application of Danderine dissolves every particle of dandruff, invigorates the scalp, stops itching and falling hair.

Danderine is to the hair what fresh showers of rain and sunshine are to the vegetation. It goes right to the roots, invigorates and strengthens them. Its exhilarating, stimulating and life-producing properties cause the hair to grow long, strong and beautiful.

You can surely have pretty, soft, lustrous hair, and lots of it, if you will just get a 25-cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any

BUSINESS AND FINANCIAL NEWS

LATEST STOCK MARKETS

By W. H. ROSS, Financial Editor

Stocks advanced higher this afternoon, but the reaction was not as cheerful. It again ruled small they were general. Among advances in New York were Canadian Pacific, Southern Pacific, Missouri Pacific, Northern Pacific, Pennsylvania, Union Pacific, Baltimore & Ohio, Lehigh Valley, American Steel & Wire, American & Texas Co., Standard Oil, and Standard Oil of California. Petroleum was down. A headline in Boston, elevated had recovered part of its decline and was still off 1/2 at 85. Boston & Maine had recovered part of its advance, but was off 1/2 at 100. Boston & Maine had recovered part of its advance, but was off 1/2 at 100. Boston & Maine had recovered part of its advance, but was off 1/2 at 100.

THE CAUSE OF THE RISE.
The cause of the sudden and substantial rise in price of stocks here the close yesterday was due to the covering by bears and they were impelled to the proceeding by what President Wilson had said in Congress on the regulation of trusts will be conservative in spirit and will not be to the better. Nothing directly or indirectly would be done to warrant the advance. The market was not so much as it was because of improvement in the situation. The short interest was not so much as it was because of improvement in the situation. The short interest was not so much as it was because of improvement in the situation.

FINANCIAL NEWS IN BRIEF.
There was no improvement in London copper warrants today, none of the quotations showing an advance of 1/2. The market was not so much as it was because of improvement in the situation. The short interest was not so much as it was because of improvement in the situation. The short interest was not so much as it was because of improvement in the situation.

RAILROADS EXPECT HAVE RISE.
There is belief in railroad circles that freight rates will be raised at least 2 1/2 per cent. It is not a decision on the part of the roads, but it is a belief in railroad circles that freight rates will be raised at least 2 1/2 per cent. THE CAUSE OF THE RISE.
The cause of the sudden and substantial rise in price of stocks here the close yesterday was due to the covering by bears and they were impelled to the proceeding by what President Wilson had said in Congress on the regulation of trusts will be conservative in spirit and will not be to the better. Nothing directly or indirectly would be done to warrant the advance. The market was not so much as it was because of improvement in the situation. The short interest was not so much as it was because of improvement in the situation.

Curley's Proposition to Sell the Public Garden Too Foolish to Be Considered

Mayor-elect Curley's first proposal after being elected Mayor is to SELL THE PUBLIC GARDEN!

This is not likely to increase respect for Mr. Curley's constructive statesmanship.

IT IS TOO FOOLISH TO BE DISCUSSED!

If Mr. Curley wants to do something to appeal to the imagination of his club—the Pro Bunco Publico, formerly the Tammany Club—why does he not suggest that the City Hall be put on roller skates and moved from its present location to Curley's own yard? That is no more nonsensical than the plan to sell the Public Garden.

LET US HEAR NO MORE OF IT!

You Must Ask, "What Is the Brain?" Not, "What Does the Brain Know?"

This Fact We Would Impress Upon Able Professor Ross, at the University of Wisconsin, and Upon Others.

Some citizens worry because "illiterate men and women are coming in crowds to the United States."

Well meaning individuals suggest laws to exclude all unable to read and write. Professor Ross, at the University of Wisconsin, a really learned and thoughtful man, is anxious about the arrival of the unlearned. His views on immigrants from Southern Europe remind us of the views of President Wilson—before the latter discovered the importance of the votes.

The following quotation from a recent article by Professor Ross is typical of a class of anxious thinkers:

Among us there are now two million foreign-born illiterates while the number of foreign-born men of voting age unable to read and write has passed the million mark. The confessed illiteracy of the multitudes coming from Southern and Eastern Europe is 35.8 per cent, as against 2.7 per cent. for the dwindling streams from the North and West. We know that the actual state is somewhat worse than these figures indicate. As the lands of ignorance discharge their surplus into our country we must expect to meet fellow citizens who, in the words of the F. Commissioner of Immigration at New York, "do not know the days of the week, the months of the year, their own ages, or the name of any country in Europe outside their own."

We remind those who worry about "illiterate immigration" that the important question is, What KIND of a brain has the immigrant? not, How much does that brain KNOW?

Professor Ross probably admits that immigrants from the North, from Ireland, for instance, have done this country great good. He need not be a very old man to know that of the immigrants from Ireland, whose sons and daughters are now doing important work, a great number arrived unable to read, and not a few unable to speak any language but Gaelic. BUT THEY BROUGHT THE RIGHT KIND OF A BRAIN WITH THEM.

They brought over brains that had been trained for centuries to think and to express feeling. The mere fact that those brains had not been taught the art of reading and writing was not important.

Millions of babies arrive, new born, in this country each year—THEY CAN READ or WRITE. But the public does not worry about it, for THEY CAN LEARN.

Similarly, the immigrants from Europe need not worry Professor Ross or others, because they cannot read. FOR THEY CAN LEARN and their children WILL learn.

It is highly probable that the mother of Abraham Lincoln could neither read nor write. Certainly she did not have what any professor would call an education. But it would have been a misfortune to exclude her had she arrived here as an immigrant. Lincoln's stepmother COULD READ AND WRITE and encouraged her stepson. The United States will do for the illiterate immigrants and their children what Lincoln's stepmother did for him. Professors and others need not worry about illiteracy from Southern Europe.

What we want in this country is good brains, good health, ambition, willingness to learn. The United States can do the rest.

What we do not want is the Asiatic brain, the Chinese, Japanese or other brain that will not and cannot make itself part of our kind of civilization.

Professor Ross is disturbed because, as he tells us, "In dispatches of August 16, 1912, is an account of a gathering of 10,000 afflicted people at a shrine at Carey, Ohio, reputed to possess a miraculous healing virtue. Special trains brought together multitudes of credulous, and at least one 'miracle' was reported. As this country fills up with the densely ignorant, there will be more of this sort of thing. The characteristic features of the Middle Ages may be expected to appear among us," etc.

We assure Professor Ross that a childlike belief in miracles need not disturb him or others. It is of course not scientific to believe that justice ruling the universe and managing ten thousand solar systems under unchanging law would suspend the power of law to oblige some individual with a miraculous cure.

But innocent belief in the miraculous is not harmful. It is probable that the professor had a grandmother, or at least a great-grandmother, believing in ghosts. Belief in ghosts is as foolish at least as belief in miracles.

The one danger to this country is the possible influx of Asiatic peoples. From that danger public opinion will probably protect the country. And public opinion also, it is to be hoped, will protect the country from the very great danger of excluding desirable men and women, simply because, like the new born babes arriving among us, they happen to be unable to read or write and need to be taught.

Outside the wind blows chill and the gray sky tells of snow.
Inside the wood fire crackles and the embers glow.
Outside the shivering fancies glean their food from the street,
Inside their happier fellows bask in the pleasant heat.

Now though the wind blows chill and the gray sky tells of snow,
The spirit of kindly feeling should set our hearts aglow.
And make those who have house and hearthstone, roof and shelter
Remember their sadder fellows, who glean in the icy street.

The Two Sisters By VIRGINIA TERHUNE VAN DE WATER

CHAPTER XXI.

I would be hard to say which looked the more embarrassed after the invitation to luncheon had been given—Miss Marlowe or Julia Marvin. The main was that the girl was impressively surprised, she could not believe how he had looked to meet her. To her he was simply a writer who had employed her sister as his stenographer. Yet something made her feel that he was a man whom one could trust. Still, in spite of this, his situation was too unconventional for her to approve of it. And all the while that these thoughts were passing through Julia Marvin's mind the staid woman at her computer was watching her curiously. This knowledge made her feel uncomfortable.

"Thank you, Mr. Deane," she said, somewhat stiffly, "but you must excuse me. I cannot accept your invitation."

"Why not?" asked the man.

"Because," said the girl, "I am not in the habit of luncheon with strangers. I do not mean to be snobbish, but as I am paid to attend to my work at this computer I have no right to absent here adding my fingers. Besides, dropping my voice and gleaning unsavory bits of gossip—this kind of an interview attracts disagreeable comment."

"It was the man's turn to flush now. 'I beg your pardon,' he exclaimed. 'I have been very thoughtless and I feel properly rebuked.' He hesitated, then added, 'I will get your address from your sister—if you do not mind. Good morning!'

Without waiting for her reply, he lifted his hat and walked rapidly away, while Julia began with contented hands to put away the loose ends that had been straggling before her. He had only been with her for three or four minutes, but somehow there were many things he had said that she would like to think over. But this was not the time for the place to do such thoughts. Then she took her seat sharply to task. Why should she let any man of whom she knew nothing affect her as this man had done? What did she have of him true?

"Where did you pick up your gentleman friend?" asked a young Julia started violently and found Minnie Malburn, a staid, steady, close by her.

"I say," Minnie went on, "how some class. I've seen him before."

"Certainly," replied Julia gravely. "I hope you do not think I would talk to a man I had never met, do you?"

"Where did you meet him?" queried the girl curiously. "He looks like a regular risk, say, don't he?"

"I don't think he looks especially rich," said Julia indifferently. "I don't know if he has money or not, and I don't care."

"As you uttered the words she perceived Minnie's eyes were riveted on her. "I don't know if he has money or not, and I don't care."

"As you uttered the words she perceived Minnie's eyes were riveted on her. "I don't know if he has money or not, and I don't care."

of the fact that she must live in cheap lodgings, but there was no place in which she could receive callers.

Moreover, this man was evidently one of the class who are used to nice things and to luxury, and she was but a poor working girl. She did not want to have any man condescend to her. She would be treated as an equal or she would have nothing to do with him. But perhaps she would never see him again. She would certainly forbid Cary to give him the address of Mrs. Halloran's house. She did not believe that Cary herself would be anxious to have her employer know just where she lived. The child was foolishly ashamed of her poverty. But in this case her false pride might stand them in good stead.

At all events the two girls could not let the matter over and over and settle their place of action. Cary was at home alone now. Julia was at the computer. She had plenty of time to rest, and the older girl had always felt that her little sister needed more care than she. Besides that, Cary did not like to work, and was very house long she might not have courage or desire to interfere.

When Julia Marvin had climbed the two flights of stairs to her room and opened the door she stood amazed. Cary was not there, but on the floor lay a dress she had worn to work that morning, and the room showed evidences of haste on the part of the person who had last dressed there.

Where could Cary be? It was half-past six, and she was usually at home by half-past three at the latest. Could anything have happened to her? Her sister pressed her hands together tightly in a sudden spasm of fear, and hurried across the room, looked out of the window. Surely she must be coming soon.

Famous "Orders in Council" By REV. T. B. GREGORY

ON hundred and seven years ago the British Government issued the famous "Orders in Council," a piece of work that was destined to make a whole lot of history that England did not reckon on.

The Orders in Council were issued as a counter to Napoleon for his "Continental System," which had declared the British Isles to be in a state of blockade.

Giving Napoleon a sound for his Order, the Order in Council compelled the ships of all neutral nations to touch at an English port to import or export merchandise, paying custom duties averaging 25 per cent, the ships neglecting this provision being declared lawful goods.

As will be readily understood, this game of intellect between the great French gambler and the British government fostered at the stroke the commerce of all Europe, carried annoyance into all families, arbitrarily modified the conditions of all nations and wrought havoc on every hand.

England, however, forgot to modify the rigors of the Order in Council in favor of the United States, and right there she made a great mistake; for it was the Orders in Council, more than anything else, that brought on the war of 1812-15.

Now if O'Neill Wright would only invent a stabilizer for Mexico! It is fortunate that the crew of the steamship that saved the Oklahoma survivors did not pursue a policy of watchful waiting.

The Government supplies exact information as to how to pay your income tax, but provides no suggestion as to what to pay it with.

The high cost of living is not a new thing. But an actor reports that not an actor has been heard in him this season.

"The Great Deceit," by Henry Ford, is far and away the most popular play of the year.

Courtship Lies Wreck Many a Marriage By DOROTHY DIX

THE Supreme Court of New York State has decided that any kind of misrepresentation goes in courtship, and that if a young man tells a young woman, as an inducement for marrying, that he has plenty of money in the bank, a lucrative job and a good home ready furnished to take her to that the said young woman has no recourse in law if she finds out that none of these things are true, but that they are merely the pipe dream of some modern Claude Lorraine.

In handing down the opinion the Justice said:

"It is a well recognized principle that, in the state of mental excitement accompanying courtship, statements made as to the mental, moral or financial condition of the parties shall not be too closely scrutinized, nor shall they be held to a strict accountability therefor."

This is not only the law, but it is the commonly accepted view of the matter. Men and women who are otherwise honest and who would not stoop to gamble with loaded dice or marked cards do not hesitate to play the love game crooked.

Men who would not invade another man's business under false pretenses do not scruple to enter a woman into matrimony by means of glittering falsehoods and misrepresentations.

Women whose consciences would not allow them to deduct a year from the age of a horse they were trying to sell, take off ten or a dozen years from their own ages when they are trying to catch a husband and hear never a whisper from the still, small voice.

What else is it but deliberate deception in a woman to let herself be expected to marry only see her when she is powdered and powdered and veiled and carried and doted up in her very best and most becoming clothes?

What else is it but fraud that makes a girl in the days of courtship act so meek and mild that she makes patient Griselda look like a terrorist? What else does she run than a confidence game when she agrees with everything her best man says and treats her every trying to please him in every way and gives him to understand that she is following him a very faint of wisdom.

What else is it than deception of the deepest dye for a man when he is courting a girl to tell her that he asks nothing in life but the bliss of murmuring words of undying love in her little shell-like ear and holding her little white hand in his, when he knows that he'll drop the little white hand the minute the marriage ceremony is said over and then go off and let her be the shell-like ear will ever hear again will be the criticism of her cooking?

What is it but rank fraud for a man when he is courting a girl to shower presents and theatre tickets on her and lead her to believe that her matrimonial pathway will be strewn with chocolate creams and violets, and then, after marriage he will row with her over a quarrel for carfare?

What is it but a gold-trick transaction that should land a man in the penitentiary for him to induce a girl to marry him for the sake of having an alibi, and then for him to go off and leave her after they are married to spend her evenings alone?

Everybody's doing it, of course, and also very nearly everybody is getting a divorce, or wishing that one could be got. If, then, we know that the world would tell the matrimonial truth, they would say that they were the victims of confidence artists, and they never, never, never would have married the one they did if they had the faintest idea of what they were getting.

Talk about state regulation of marriage! What we need is state regulation of courtship and some law that would make it a felony for any man or woman not to give the party of the other part a square deal, and not to let him or her at least know the sled of a matrimonial bargain he or she was making.

Of course it would be a discouragement of marriage, but it would also be a discouragement of divorce. Fewer people might get married if they knew what they were going to get. In reality, but more people would stay married.

It's the lies of courtship that lie at the bottom of most domestic unhappiness. If men and women would be honest with each other before marriage, there would be very little trouble after marriage.

An Entirely 'New' New Testament By REV. CHARLES F. AKED, D. D.

WHEN all is said and done, the Bible remains the newest and most interesting volume in all the literature of the world. Its truths are older than the hills, and its thoughts are forever fresh with the freshness of the morning. And a "new" New Testament is an evanescent thing. The latest is published by Hodder & Stoughton of New York and London. From the mechanical point of view it is perfect.

The "new" Testament is entirely new. It is the work of an Oxford scholar, Dr. James Moffatt, famous in all the Christian world. It is his own work. He is under obligation to no church or society or committee. He is independent of other minds except as the greatest scholars and thinkers stand upon the labors of earlier generations.

"Bibles" the reader of the "new" Testament will certainly experience. From this point of view Dr. Moffatt's work is full of faults. The gains in his version are enormous. The failures are innumerable. On the same page are found changes which make one cry out with surprise and delight and gratitude, and changes which make one gnash his teeth.

There are fine passages which rank as literature, even when brought side by side with the authorized version. There are passages which make one wonder what Dr. Moffatt has done with his literary sense, with his feeling for the sacredness of the words of God. Dr. Moffatt is obsessed by certain words, such as the awkward "and" and the ugly "yet." Here are dreadful specimens:

"Then Jerusalem . . . went out to him and he baptized by him." Then Jesus came on the scene from Galilee, to get baptized by John. "I need to get baptized by you." "Perhaps this is for a while, that you might get him back for good." "Through him we have got access to this grace."

"This cup means the new covenant ratified by my blood."

"Now in the Lord I insist and protest that you must give up living like pagans; for their purposes are futile, their intelligence is darkened, they are estranged from the life of God by the ignorance which their darkness of heart has produced in them—men who have recklessly abandoned themselves to sensuality, with a lust for the business of impurity in every shape and form."

While the vivid metaphor of the Christian's armor grows more vivid in:

"Hold your ground, tighten the belt of truth about your loins, and integrity as your coat of mail."

Once Dr. Moffatt's weakness becomes a strength. His "newspaper English" is in its vigor; it is angry, but it does not sin; never let the sun set upon your transgression; give the devil no chance."

The best of all is the translation of Paul's famous hymn of love, itself the greatest miracle of Christianity. There is hardly a line in Dr. Moffatt's version which is not new. Every phrase is a new text for the preacher, with a last for the business of impurity in every shape and form.

"Love, my brethren, very kind. Love knows no jealousy; love makes no parade, gives itself to all, is never rude, never jealous, never irritated, never provoked; love is never proud when others go wrong, love is glorified by goodness, always ready to expose, always eager to believe the best, always hopeful, always patient."

And the end of it all:

"This faith and hope and love last forever, and these are the greatest of all is love."

This is not literary English. It is not good "newspaper" English. It is impossible not to read some passages as too free and easy.

There is much that is entirely noble in the translation. Sometimes the gain is strength, sometimes the loss is grace. The suggestion, always there is a gain in lucidity. No one should give up the King James Version in the New Testament until Dr. Moffatt has been consulted. The probability is that this translation the difficulty explains itself.

Here are some good examples of added intelligibility and strength:

In-Shoots

If you would avoid indignation about the person who delights in telling bad news.

The man who can think when he is down and out will generally come out.

The man who lingers at first how will never make a home run.

It is hard to pick the winner in another fellow's game.
